Republican Congressional Convention.

SECOND DISTRICT.

A Republican Convention for the Second Congressional District in the State of Wisconsin, will be held at the city of La Crosse, on Wednesday the 22d day of August, 1860, at 12 o'clock M., for the purpose of electing a delegate to the National Convention of said district to be held at the next general election.

Each assembly district will be entitled to two delegates to said convention.

The several assembly district committees are requested to take measures for the appointment of delegates to said congressional convention, from their respective districts.

DAVID ATWOOD,
JOHN W. TAYLOR,
NORMAN EASTMAN, [Dist. Com.]
J. C. CLEVELAND,

Called on, June 20, 1860.

The Great Mass Meeting at "Old Abe's" Home.

The meeting at Springfield, on the 28th, was a great affair. Great numbers, great enthusiasm, and we believe will be great in its results. There appeared to be an outpouring of the people of the "Sucker State," determined upon a grand ovation to their candidate, at his own home. It was impossible for any one to estimate the numbers present, with any precision. We heard many expressions of opinion—some said there were 50,000, which was the lowest figure we heard named, while there were those who placed it at 125,000, and far ahead of the great national convention at Chicago, or the United States fair. We have not seen any reason to vary our first estimate, which was 60,000. We have not a doubt that there were that many people there; there may have been 75,000, or even more. The people were not together at any one time. During the day there were three or four points of attraction, and there were crowds at these points nearly all the time, which made an accurate opinion of numbers nearly impossible. But wherever they were the enthusiasm was irrepressible. Never since the memorable year of 1840 have we seen anything at all like it. It is evident that Lincoln has the hearts of the people. The common people of Illinois "take to him"—"freeze to him," as the expression goes—and their love for the man is unbounded. Their expressions of admiration was after their own ideas, but heartfelt and hearty. No one who saw it can doubt that he will carry Illinois, at the November election, by thousands.

The place towards which the people were most strongly attracted was Mr. Lincoln's own home. Here he received them in a sort of review. A grand monster procession of all the wide awake companies, carriages, teams of all sorts, lady and gentlemen equestrians, with banners innumerable, and bands of music, passed before his house, Mr. Lincoln standing upon the steps, receiving their cheers and congratulations. For three hours this procession continued to pass. It seemed to have no end, and its length has been estimated at ten miles. There was no same-sameness about it—the banners and mottoes were all new and pithy, and there was continually some fresh incident to attract attention or call forth cheers.

Mr. Lincoln's manner was easy, self-possessed, good humored, smiling and modest. He enjoyed many hearty laughs at the ludicrousness of some of the banners, but none more than several of the attempts at his own likeness. He is not a handsome man by any means, but some of the portraits were hideous; one in particular, which was so much of baroque, although not intended as such, that the whole crowd, instantly detected its character, and burst into a laugh, in which "old Abe" joined.

While the procession was moving forward the cheering was continued and enthusiastic. There were frequent calls for Mrs. Lincoln, and a portion of the time she stood near her husband with other ladies. She was received with rapturous applause, and bore herself with simple dignity and womanly modesty. If we may judge from her appearance she will do the honors of the white house with credit.

In the procession there were several hundred lady equestrians, with gentlemen accompanying them. There were several omnibuses with young ladies dressed alike representing the states. In one of them the representation of Kansas was dressed in mourning, on account of her exclusion from the sisterhood of the states.

It would be impossible to give a list of a tenth part of the mottoes upon the banners; but the expressions of affection and esteem for our honored candidate were so numerous as to give a somewhat marked character to the whole. It is evident that people people who know Lincoln love him for his honesty and manliness. Many of the banners expressed this idea: "We want an honest president"; "The home of Lincoln will honor him"; "Lincoln has told and we will reward him"; "Abraham the faithful, the just and the true." It was treated throughout by the crowd as if they felt these sentiments to be true, and while they honored and appreciated him as a public man, they were as familiar with him as if they were all his nearest neighbors. Here was an instance where familiarity does not breed contempt, but which was tempered with love and admiration.

Of course there were plenty of rails, and allusions to them in the banners. There was a wagon with a log cabin upon it, and a pioneer splitting rails—a flat boat upon rails—"Abe Lincoln the rail candidate." One township turned out five hundred strong, and were headed with an immense wagon drawn by twenty-three yoke of cattle. Upon the wagon was a blacksmith shoeing a horse; a shoemaker making shoes; wheelwright making wheels; a gang of men splitting rails; tinners, weavers and carpenters.

There were many mottoes referring to the homestead measure showing that this has taken a deep hold upon the people. A delegation from a town in Egypt had this significant motto—"We do care whether slavery is voted up or down"—another, "We will fence the niggers in"—meaning of course that they will fence in slavery and let it die out. There were many enthusiastic republicans who say they will give a good account of Egypt in November.

Our space forbids a further reference to this great procession, although we might occupy columns in describing its cars, wagons, devices, mottoes, etc. It was the grandest affair ever witnessed, and we saw some of the monster processions of 1840.

The convention proper was at the fair ground where there were five stands erected for public speakers. They were occupied by many whom we did not know, but among them were Senator Doolittle and Judge Trumbull who made eloquent and telling speeches. Our Senator gained for himself new laurels on this occasion. He was warmly greeted and spoken of with admiration by many who heard him for the first time.

During the speaking Mr. Lincoln came upon the ground in a carriage, accompanied by a few friends, and as soon as he was recognized it produced the wildest enthusiasm among the people. They deserted all the stands and crowded about him insisting upon a speech. He was taken to a stand and not being able to resist their importunities stood up to address them. The huzzas which greeted him were vociferous and long continued. At last order was restored and he spoke as follows:

MY FELLOW CITIZENS.—I appear among you upon this occasion with no intention of making a speech. It is my purpose, since I have been placed in my present position, to make no speeches. This assembly having been drawn together at the place of my residence, it appeared to be the wish of those constituting this vast assembly to see me, and certainly it is my wish to see all of you. I appear upon the ground here at this time only for the purpose of offering myself the best opportunity of seeing you and enabling you to see me. I confess with gratitude, be it understood, that I did not suppose that my appearance among you would create the tumult which I now witness. I am profoundly grateful for this manifestation of your feelings. I am grateful because it is a tribute such as can be paid to no man as a man. It is the evidence that four years from this time you will give a like manifestation to the man who will give the representative of the truth on the questions that now agitate the public mind; and it is because you will then fight for this cause as you do now, or with even greater ardor that now, though I be dead and gone. I most profoundly and sincerely thank you. Having said this much, allow me now to say that it is my wish that you will hear this public discussion by others of our friends who are present for the purpose of addressing you, and that you will kindly let me be silent.

It was with great difficulty that he retired from among his admirers, who seemed to care for nothing but to see and hear "Old Abe."

In the evening there was a grand display by the Wide Awakes who numbered four or five thousand. The streets were all ablaze with torches, bonfires, and fire-works generally, while the vast crowd cheered continually. This was kept up for a long time. Nobody seemed to be tired—every body was enthusiastic—nobody wanted to be anywhere else; and every body felt proud of "Old Abe," of the great occasion, and of the glorious state of Illinois which could give us such a candidate.

The scene that night at Springfield will never be forgotten by those who participated in it. The grand spectacle, the out-gushing enthusiasm of sixty or seventy thousand people, poured forth in cheer upon cheer, was magnetic in its effect and overpowering upon the beholder. No one could witness it without being deeply moved. The people are in earnest in their support of our great Cause and our noble Candidate, and the eighth of August will be responded to on the sixth of November by a republican majority of thousands in the state of Illinois.

NEW YORK.—The Breckinridge party in New York have made a strong nomination for governor. The Wisconsin says in reference to it—"James T. Brady is an eminent and popular Irish lawyer of New York, and as he is a Roman Catholic, the Breckinridge hope thereby to divide the Roman Catholic vote of the state, which the Douglasists have claimed to be a unit for the Illinois senator. Under the circumstances, it is a strong nomination and well planned to break the back-bone of the Douglas party in the cities where Douglas has heretofore been the strongest."

The New York Herald thinks that politicians need not spend much money in the canvass, and adds:

"All money bestowed to aid in the work of electing either Breckinridge, Bell or Douglas, are money foolishly thrown away. The result of the election is a foregone conclusion. Lincoln will be elected; not only so, but from present appearances he will walk over the course."

TERRIBLE TORRADO.—A VILLAGE ALMOST DESTROYED.—The Fort Madison (Iowa) Plaindealer, of the 2d inst., says:

We learn from a gentleman who resides in the village of Charleston, in this county, that the storm which visited this city on Saturday evening, doing comparatively little damage, amounted to a destructive tornado at that place. Some twenty buildings were more or less injured, and some of them completely demolished. No person was killed, and none seriously injured, which must be considered almost miraculous amid so much destruction. Several head of cattle were killed in the vicinity by the falling of trees and sheds. Crops standing in stacks were scattered over the fields, and corn was considerably damaged.

POSITION OF DOUGLAS.—The "World," the new daily paper in New York, discusses very fully the doctrine of protection to slave property in the territories, and Douglas' idea of "unfriendly legislation," concluding its article with the following propositions:

"When the Douglas party admits that the constitution gives to slaveholders the right to settle in the territories, they virtually admit, for which the Breckinridge party contend, that the latter is the more logical and consistent; but both stand virtually on the same ground. It is unworthy the position of a statesman like Mr. Douglas, to concede the right of the south, and then suggest a way of rendering that right a nullity by a trick of territorial legislation."

Douglas' position is simply that of an artful deceiver. There is nothing manly in his course and his dogma of squatter sovereignty is a delusion on the part of its sincere advocates and a deception on his part. The constitution either carries slavery into the territories or it does not. If it carries it, it is a nullity by a trick of territorial legislation."

If it does not carry the institution, then no number or circumstances of squatters can rightfully introduce so monstrous a wrong as slavery. The republicans who deny the power of the constitution in this respect and resist the introduction of the institution, and the slaveholders who assert the power and demand protection for what they consider their property, are the only consistent parties. No middle ground is tenable; those who assume to take it for the purpose of avoiding a troublesome question, or to practice a fraud by permitting indirectly what they dare not openly aid.

Frank Blair Elected for Both Terms.

It turns out that Frank Blair has been elected to congress for both terms. The St. Louis Democrat of yesterday says:

We were premature, it appears, in concluding the election of Barrett for the short term. By official count there are over 200,000 republican tickets which were polled for "F. Blair congress," which he has not received credit for so far, and which give him a majority over Barrett of fifty or sixty votes. That he is entitled to these votes both on the long and the short term, no doubt can be entertained. The ticket on which his name thus appears is headed "The republican ticket," with the exception of the candidates for governor and marshal.

It will, therefore, we submit, be the duty of the proper authorities to give Mr. Blair what he is so obviously entitled to. Indeed, we cannot imagine that Mr. Barrett, who so affects to hold the verdict of the ballot box sacred, however informally the voting may have been accomplished, would have the hardihood to claim the seat for the short term, under the circumstances.

The united footings of the short term are as follows:

For J. Richard Barrett 12,475
For Francis P. Blair 12,534
For Blair 207-12,751

Actual majority for Blair 66

These 207 votes were thrown out because they failed to state whether they were intended for the long or short term, or both.

As each ballot is numbered and every voter's name registered with the number corresponding to his ballot, it is proposed to call these 207 votes up before the court and ascertain how they intended to vote.

Good local authority says this can be done and these votes recorded. This will give Blair his seat in the 30th Congress, and give additional lustre to the already brilliant victory. Glory enough for one day!

The republicans of St. Louis have elected, besides the member for congress, a state senator, twelve members of the legislature, a sheriff, a marshal, a tailor, a corn-lawyer, School Commissioner, sundry Constables and Justices of the Peace—making a clean sweep of the board. And to all this must be added the election of Major Rollins to congress, from the 2d district, who is a good republican and a national politician.

His returns indicate the election of Orr for Governor, who was supported by the republicans and Americans.

STILL CONTINUED.—The Indianapolis Journal says:—The Wahash Plaindealer, the only Douglas organ in Wahash county, and the leading one in the eleventh district, has hailed down the names of Douglas and Johnson, and announced its purpose to support Lincoln and Hamlin hereafter.

We noticed last week that the editor, after getting up a spicy issue in behalf of Douglas on Friday, had joined the Wahash republican club on Friday night, but doubted if it were anything more than a quip. It now appears to be a real and sincere change, and we need hardly say a valuable one to the republicans of Wahash.

Still another. After the Breckinridge demonstration of Tuesday, Charles Conlon of this city, a prominent German Douglas democrat, for years the leading adviser, and most reliable defender of the faith among the Germans, recently a justice of the peace, and one of the marshals of the Douglas procession on the 18th, announced his fixed determination to support Lincoln, and his desire on a fitting opportunity to give his reasons, publicly in his afternoon lecture on the 2d inst. His chief reason is the impossibility of electing Douglas, and his preference, between Lincoln and Breckinridge, for Lincoln. Like all other sensible observers, he sees that Douglas cannot be elected, either by the people or the house, and he has no wish to strengthen presidential measures by voting so as to defeat the only man whose policy opposes slavery extension.

THE REASON.—A cynical individual, on reading a pathetic story in one of the papers lately, noted it in his memorandum book as follows: "Somebody whistled."

Teacher calls up big boy on suspicion. Big boy comes up and holds out his hand, sullen and savage. Noble little boy comes manfully forward and says, "I'm the boy that whistled, sir," at the same time extending his hand. Teacher summons down and lets them both off. (Mem: Noble little boy thought teacher wouldn't lick him if he told the truth, but knew big boy would lick him if he didn't, and that's the secret of all that sort of thing.)

The Lafayette Journal says that a lady, Miss Clara Goggin, while passing along a street in that place, in company with her sister, a few days ago, stopped to look at some doggerel types, when a well dressed man stopped near her, and while she was intently examining the pictures, an apparently accidental whisk of his handkerchief past her face set her to sneezing and for a moment stupefied her. When she recovered, her portmanteau, which had been hanging on her arm, was gone, and with it all her money.

It is a fact little known, that for the first five years of our government, the United States senate always sat in secret. The first time the doors were opened for public discussion was on the contest to the right of Albert Gallatin to a seat in the senate. This seat was contested on the ground that Mr. Gallatin had not been a citizen of the United States, required, nine years, a citizen of the United States.

WHAT HAS HE DONE?—We will give a "pretty thing" to any rampant Douglas man who will point us to a single act of any consequence performed by Douglas during the session of congress just closed. Take any question of importance to the people, upon which an issue can be made, and you will find a first class statesman, ready to give a firm, open, unequivocal stand, and show where Douglas has spoken or voted for or against it. He has kept mum, with an eye single to the presidency.

When the senate committees were reconstructed in such a manner, and for such a purpose, that any senator with a spark of manliness, independence or dignity would have been there, and made himself heard—in words, while the senate was keeping insult and indignity upon Douglas—where was he? He had the pluck.

When the death of Frederick was announced—the man who had been fighting Douglas' battles—when the tributes were to be paid to his memory, and when Douglas, of all living men, should have been there, among the foremost in honoring the memory of the martyr—where was he? He had the pluck.

When the bill for the admission of Kansas was up, where was Douglas, the champion of popular sovereignty, who had divided the democratic party upon the Kansas question? He was paired off!

When the homestead bill was to be voted upon, giving to the poor laboring man a free home, for the use and support of himself and family—where was Douglas? He had a sore throat!

So we might go on. Whenever a question was up, on which a senator might show himself to be a man, or upon which an issue might be made before the people, or when his enemies were handling him and his dogmas without mercy, Douglas was invariably absent—cause, pleurisy, diarrhea, sore throat or pained!

No! he opened his mouth on one occasion—that was when he introduced his invasion bill, under the pretense of protecting the slave states against invasions and insurrections, but in reality to gag free speech in the north, and gain the smiles of the southern lords, who have been kicking and cutting him for more than a year. Here Douglas stood up and fluently and bombastically, but the effort failed in the effect for which it was intended. We believe he also produced a rebash of his squatter sovereignty harangues and magazine essays, but that likewise fell stillborn to the earth.

Such is Douglas—called by way of burlesque, a "Statesman," the "Little Giant," and the "man whom intelligent people are so easily and impudently asked to vote for!"—Kansas Chief.

SPRINGFIELD ARMOY.—We learn from a gentleman who has been traveling recently in Massachusetts, and who was shown all through the United States armory at Springfield, that the southerners are preparing for the "irrepressible conflict" in case Lincoln is elected. One hundred and five thousand state arms have recently been ordered to be distributed as follows:

15,000 for Alabama.
25,000 for North Carolina.
30,000 for Louisiana.
20,000 for Augusta, Ga.

105,000 stand of arms for five slave states have been ordered at this armory within a short time. And what is not a little singular, these arms are the same lot that were manufactured in 1829, the year the Missouri compromise was adopted. They are the same old flint-lock muskets, now altered over with percussion locks, and go to the same parties who broke down the sacred compact embodied in the Missouri compromise act, which the southerners intended to use against the northerners to enforce the passage of that act, if need be. It appears that all orders at the armory, except an occasional small order for some military company, come from the southern states. They must either be grown gentlemen in the slave states, or contemptible cowards.

RATTLE SNAKE BITE.—Last Friday, John Enright, residing in the town of Alford, while working in a field of rye, was bit on the forefinger of the right hand by a rattle snake. When he first discovered the reptile, it was gliding away from him. He seized a rake and tried to strike it, but failing in this, and seeing the snake run to a hole, he caught it by the tail, dragged it out, when it struck him. This occurred about noon. He immediately began to drink whiskey, started for this city, and called at Edward Johnson's drug store for medical aid. The hand and wrist commenced swelling and became painful. Near half past one o'clock Dr. James Cody examined the wound. As the successful treatment of a case of this kind may be generally interesting, we will give a full account of the course pursued.

When Dr. Cody first saw it, the swelling was rapidly extending into the arm. He mixed four grains of iodine of potassium, and twelve drops of tincture of iodine, in a glass of brandy, and gave a dose to the patient. He made several punctures into the cellular tissues on the back of the hand, which were well injected with tincture of iodine. Tincture of iodine was also freely applied to the inflamed finger and hand, and made to follow the inflammation in its course up the arm. Cooling poultices were steadily applied.

About two hours tincture of iodine and brandy were again given, but common whiskey was the principal drink, and taken so as to keep up a constant state of intoxication, which last effect was not allowed to abate for a moment. In 29 hours after this treatment commenced, the inflammation extended to the shoulder, but did not pass beyond it. In 29 hours the swelling began to go down, and no mortification appearing, it was thought safe to allow the patient to go home, his recovery being regarded as certain. At last accounts he was doing well. That probably, will be the last rattlesnake he will attempt to catch with his hands. The assailing virulence of its poison began instantly to show itself, and the escape from its fatal effects was hardly less narrow than fortunate. There are but few of the venomous and dangerous creatures in this part of the state, and they are being killed off fast.—Waterloo Democrat.

A MAGNIFICENT THOROUGHFARE.—When the improvements now being made on Canal street, New Orleans, are completed, that street will be the most magnificent in the United States. It is to be a mile long, and in length, extending from the Mississippi river to Lake Pochartrain, and nearly two hundred feet wide, with a parterre promenade in the center, of forty feet in width. At all the grand crossings, monuments or fountains are to be erected. Already Clay's monument stands at the junction of St. Charles and Canal streets, and it is now proposed to erect a splendid monument to Fulton, to be placed at the head of the street fronting the Mississippi. This street is the fashionable promenade.

DROUGHT AND FAMINE IN TEXAS.—A gentleman of Indianapolis has received a letter from a relative living in Rusk county, Texas, in which it is stated that the crops are all cut off throughout that whole region, and corn is selling at $2 per bushel, flour $15 per barrel and bacon at $20 per lb. Great suffering already exists among the poor, and public meetings have been called to procure relief. All who can do so are leaving the country. There has been no rain there since the 15th of last May. All the tributaries of Red river are dried up.

The Ship of State.

WEEK-AWAKE 3070—BY E. W. LOCKE.

Here! here! a signal gun is heard, it's coming out beyond the bar!

The good old ship of state, my boys, is coming out to sea.

With cheerful sails, and anchor gone, I fear the region will strand her.

She carries now a sorry crew, And needs a new commander.

Chorus—Our Lincoln is the man—Our Lincoln is the man—

With a sturdy man, From the true Free State—

Our Lincoln is the man.

Four years ago she put to sea, With prospects brightly beaming,

For she was armed with a strong beam, And every port was streaming.

She loved the gale, she loved the waves, For she was the ship of state.

But now she lies a wreck, And her crew is all decayed.

Chorus—Lincoln was the man, Buchanan was the man.

But his four years' trip, Leaves a sad record behind.

Chorus—Lincoln was the man, Buchanan was the man.

There's nothing aboard the ship, There's no force can smother.

The ship is up to the mast head, They're cutting down the mast.

Chorus—Lincoln was the man, Buchanan was the man.

But his four years' trip, Leaves a sad record behind.

Chorus—Lincoln was the man, Buchanan was the man.

Our ship is getting out of trim, The time to sail is gone.

She's full of holes and leaks, and she's full of holes and leaks.

She's full of holes and leaks, and she's full of holes and leaks.

Chorus—Lincoln was the man, Buchanan was the man.

But his four years' trip, Leaves a sad record behind.

Chorus—Lincoln was the man, Buchanan was the man.

Republican Congressional Convention.

SECOND DISTRICT.

A Republican Convention for the Second Congressional District in the State of Wisconsin, will be held at the city of Janesville, on Wednesday, the 8th day of August, 1860, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing delegates to the National Convention, to be held at Philadelphia, on the 17th day of September, 1860, to be supported at the next general election.

Each assembly district will be entitled to two delegates to said convention.

The several assembly district committees are requested to take measures for the appointment of delegates to said congressional convention, from their respective districts.

DAVID ATWOOD,
CHARLES HOLL,
SURMAN EASTMAN, Dist. Com.
J. C. CHANDLER,
Janesville, June 22, 1860.

The Great Mass Meeting at "Old Abe's."

The meeting at Springfield, on the 8th, was a great affair. Great numbers, great in enthusiasm, and we believe will be great in its results. There appeared to be an outpouring of the people of the "Sucker State," determined upon a grand ovation to their candidate, at his own home. It was impossible for any one to estimate the numbers present, with any precision. We heard many expressions of opinion—some said there were 50,000, which was the lowest figure we heard named, while there were those who placed it at 125,000, and far ahead of the great national convention at Chicago, or the United States fair. We have not seen any reason to vary our first estimate, which was 50,000. We have not a doubt that there were that many people there; there may have been 75,000, or even more. The people were not together at any one time. During the day there were three or four points of attraction, and there were crowds at these points nearly all the time, which made an accurate opinion of numbers nearly impossible. But wherever they were the enthusiasm was irrepressible. Never since the memorable year of 1840 have we seen anything at all like it. It is evident that Lincoln has the hearts of the people. The common people of Illinois "take to him"—

"freeze to him," as the expression goes—and their love for the man is unbounded.

Their expressions of admiration was after their own ideas, but heartfelt and hearty.

No one who saw it can doubt that he will carry Illinois, at the November election, by thousands.

The place towards which the people were most strongly attracted was Mr. Lincoln's own home. Here he received them in a sort of review. A grand monster procession of all the wide awake companies, carriages, teams of all sorts, lady and gentlemen equestrians, with banners innumerable, and bands of music, passed before his house, Mr. Lincoln standing upon the steps, receiving their cheers and congratulations. For three hours this procession continued to pass. It seemed to have no end, and its length has been estimated at ten miles. There was no sameness about it—the banners and mottoes were all new and pithy, and there was continually some fresh incident to attract attention or call forth cheers.

Mr. Lincoln's manner was easy, self-possessed, good humored, smiling and modest.

He enjoyed many hearty laughs at the lud-icrousness of some of the banners, but none more than several of the attempts at his own witticisms. He is not a handsome man by any means, but some of the portraits were hideous; one in particular, which was so much of burlesque, although not intended as such, that the whole crowd, instantly detected its character, and burst into a laugh

Of course there were plenty of rails, and allusions to them in the banners. There was a wagon with a log cabin upon it, and a pioneer splitting rails—a flat boat upon rails

—the Lincoln rail candidate. One township turned out five hundred strong, and were headed with an immense wagon drawn by twenty-three yoke of cattle. Upon the wagon was a blacksmith shoeing a horse; a shoemaker making shoes; wheelwright making wheels; a gang of men splitting rails; tinners, weavers and carpenters.

There were many mottoes referring to the homestead measure showing that this has taken a deep hold upon the people.—

A delegation from a town in Egypt had this significant motto—"We do care whether slavery is voted up or down"—another, "we will fence the niggers in"— meaning of course that they will fence in slavery and let it die out. There were many enthusiastic republicans who say they will give a good account of Egypt in November.

Our space forbids a further reference to this great procession, although we might occupy columns in describing its cars, wagons, devices, mottoes, etc. It was the grandest affair we ever witnessed, and we saw some of the monster processions of 1840.

The convention proper was at the fair ground where there were five stands erected for public speakers. They were occu-ped by many whom we did not know, but among them were Senator Doolittle and Judge Trumbull who made eloquent and telling speeches. Our Senator gained for himself new laurels on this occasion. He was warmly greeted and spoken of with admirations by many who heard him for the first time.

During the speaking Mr. Lincoln came upon the ground in a carriage, accompanied by a few friends, and as soon as he was recognized it produced the wildest enthusiasm among the people. They deserted all the stands and crowded about him insisting upon a speech. He was taken to a stand and not being able to resist their importunities stood up to address them. The huzzas which greeted him were vociferous and long continued. At last order was restored and he spoke as follows:

MY FELLOW CITIZENS.—I appear among you upon this occasion with no intention of making a speech. It is my purpose, since

I have been placed in my present position, to make no speeches. The assembly has been drawn together at the place of my residence, it appeared to be the wish of those constituting this vast assembly to see me, and it certainly is my wish to see all of you. I appear upon the ground here at this time only for the purpose of offering myself the best opportunity of seeing you and enabling you to see me. I confess with gratitude, be it understood, that I did not suppose that my appearance among you would create the tumult which I now witness. I am profoundly grateful for this manifestation of your feelings. I am grateful because it is a tribute such as can be paid to no man as a man. It is the evidence that four years from this time you will give a like manifestation to the new man who is to be the representative of the truth on the questions that now agitate the public mind;

and it is because you will then fight for this cause as you do now, or with even greater ardor than now, though I be dead and gone. I most profoundly and sincerely thank you. Having said thus much, allow me now to say that it is my wish that you will hear this public discussion by others of our friends who are present for the purpose of addressing you, and that you will kindly let me be silent.

It was with great difficulty that he retired from among his admirers, who seemed to care for nothing but to see and hear "Old

Positior or Douglas.—The "World,"

the new daily paper in New York, dissemi-nates fully the doctrine of protection to slave property in the territories, and Douglas's idea of "unfriendly legislation," concluding its article with the following propositions:

"When the Douglas party admits that the constitution gives to slaveholders the right to settle in the territories, they virtually admit all for which the Breckinridge party contend. The latter are the more logical and consistent; but both stand virtually on the same ground. It is unworthy the position of a statesman like Mr. Douglas, to concede the right of the south, and then suggest a way of rendering that right

a nullity by a trick of territorial legislation."

Douglas's position is simply that of an artful dodger. There is nothing manly in his course and his dogma of squatter sovereignty is a delusion on the part of its sincere advocates and a deception on his part.

The constitution either carries slavery into the territories or it does not. If it carries that institution with it, then it ought to afford the protection the slaveholders ask.—

If it does not carry the institution, then no number or circumstances of squatters can rightfully introduce so monstrous a wrong as slavery. The republicans who deny the power of the constitution in this respect and resist the introduction of the institution, and the slaveholders who assert the power and demand protection for what they consider their property, are the only consistent parties. No middle ground is tenable;

those who assume it take it for the purpose of avoiding a troublesome question, or to practice a fraud by permitting indirectly

what they dare not openly say.

Frank Blair Elected for Both Terms.

It turns out that Frank Blair has been elected to congress for both terms. The St.

Louis Democrat of yesterday says:

We were premature, it appears, in conceding the election of Barrett for the short term. My official count there are over two hundred republican tickets which were polled for "Frank Blair," which he has not received credit for so far, and which gives him a majority over Barrett of fifty or sixty votes. That he is entitled to these votes both on the long and the short term, no doubt can be entertained. The ticket on which his name thus appears is headed

"The republican ticket," with the exception of the candidates for coroner and marshal.

It will, therefore, we submit, be the duty of the proper authorities to give Mr. Blair what he is so obviously entitled to, and we cannot imagine that Mr. Barrett, who so affects to hold the verdict of the ballot box sacred, however informally the voting may have been accomplished, would have the hardihood to claim the seat for the short term, under the circumstances.

The united feelings of the short term are as follows:

For J. Richard Barrett 12,534

For Francis P. Blair 12,534

For Blair 207-12,751

Actual majority for Blair 66

These 297 votes were thrown out because they failed to state whether they were intended for the long or short term, or both. As each ballot is numbered and every voter's name registered with the number corresponding to his ballot, it is proposed to call these 297 votes up before the court and as-ertain how they intended to vote.

Good legal authority says this can be done and these votes recorded. This will give Blair his seat in the 30th Congress, and give additional glory to the already brilliant victory. Glory enough for one day!

The republicans of St. Louis have elected, besides the member for congress, a State Senator, twelve members of the Legislature, a Sheriff, a Marshal, a Jailor, Coroner, School Commissioners, sundry Con-
